

Gallup Refinery

Fact Sheet

REFINERY INFORMATION

The Gallup Refinery is located on 880 acres near Gallup, New Mexico and is the only active refinery in the Four Corners area. The crude oil throughput of the refinery is approximately 26,000 barrels per day (bpd).

The Four Corners area serves as one source of raw material supply for the Gallup Refinery. A locally produced, high-quality crude known as Four Corners Sweet is the primary feedstock for this refinery, although the supply is supplemented with other feedstocks from outside the area (Northern New Mexico, Northern and Western Arizona, Southern Colorado and Southern Utah). Crude oil is either collected by a pipeline network, rail or delivered by truck transports.

The Gallup Refinery has crude distillation, hydrotreating for naphtha and distillate, reforming for high-octane gasoline production, catalytic cracking, and an HF alkylation unit to convert produced LPGs back into high-octane gasoline.

The Gallup Refinery's product slate includes gasoline, diesel, propane, butane, and heavy fuel oils.
